“Alaska Students’ Educational Bill of Rights” promotes excellence in public education

2020 initiative will create opportunities, standards, and access to public education in Alaska from Pre-K to the University of Alaska

ANCHORAGE (August 2, 2019) -- Today, Alaska education leaders submitted a ballot measure application to fortify a continuous system of high quality public education. The ballot initiative provides detailed direction and benchmarks to improve outcomes and increase opportunities and accessibility to an excellent education for every Alaska student.

If approved by the voters in November 2020, the initiative would ensure that Alaska students of all ages have access to a high quality public education.

“It is well documented that participation in early learning and pre-elementary programs lead to higher educational achievement, better health, and higher socioeconomic status in adulthood,” said early childhood education advocate, Rabbi Abram Goodstein. “Too many Alaska kids never even have the chance to learn from trained educators prior to kindergarten or first grade. The Alaska Students’ Educational Bill of Rights gives parents the opportunity to vote for early learning opportunities and a continuous system of high quality public education.”

“All Alaska children deserve the opportunity, support, and time to learn. This measure is about ensuring that Alaska families know they have sufficiently resourced public education institutions for early learning, K-12 and post-secondary education,” said 2016 Alaska Teacher of the Year Amy Jo Meiners.

“Our University is established in our Alaska State Constitution. Alaska students should be able to pursue an excellent higher education right here in Alaska at a university that is affordable and accessible to all Alaskans,” said University of Alaska Anchorage student, and Executive at UAA Student Government, Alexander Jorgensen.

If approved, the ballot measure makes clear that Alaskans expect their leaders to invest in a quality education system as defined by Alaska voters.
